Just Art - Challenging Racism and Promoting Social Justice

Art takes many forms. Paintings, drawings, and sculptures... Art also includes other forms of expression. Art can be music, drama, and writing. It can be photography, videos, and dance. In short, art allows us to express ourselves through many different formats and media.

With this in mind, Ridgewater created the Just Art project as way for our students, faculty, staff, Alumni and community to express their feelings regarding social justice and racism.

Just Art is a community Facebook page where you're invited to submit your art as we move forward and come together. View and/or contribute...

From President Johnson

As part of our ongoing college commitment to combat racism and promote equity, inclusion and social justice, I would like to share an internet resource for individual reading to increase understanding of the personal impact of racism, inequity and related social issues in our nation.

I am sharing a link to an issue of Connect, a magazine published by the University of Minnesota's College of Education and Human Development. It is a special issue from Fall 2020 with a series of personal reflections and commentaries that focus on racism, equity and social justice. Please make time to read the essays – I recommend reading them one at a time to allow space to reflect on the messages, rather than reading through the entire issue in an extended session. I think you will find a lot to think about that can help many of us better understand the issues and challenges faced by many people in our state, region and local communities – and on our campuses.

- Craig Johnson
President, Ridgewater College

Agriculture Excellence, Today and Tomorrow

Ag Expansions: New Poultry and Ag Power & Equipment Technician Program

In Fall 2020, Ridgewater started a new Poultry Management certificate. Developed in partnership with industry leaders and the University of Minnesota, the Ridgewater 20-credit certificate provides a solid foundation for potential advanced education and a strong base knowledge needed to be successful in the poultry industry. In addition to the new Poultry program, just two years ago, Ridgewater added an Ag Power and Equipment Technician program to meet the critical need for repair and maintenance of farm equipment and machinery.

Farm Business Management (FBM) Changes Under Discussion; Willmar Campus Ag Programs Will Continue

As announced in a recent press release, Ridgewater College is exploring the possibility of transferring its off-campus Farm Business Management (FBM) program (which serves working farmers in the region with their business needs) to Central Lakes College and Minnesota West Community and Technical College. If the transfer is approved, FBM students would continue to receive FBM education locally, but through other institutions.

Ridgewater's on-campus post-secondary Ag programs based on the Willmar Campus will not be impacted by the proposed change to FBM and will continue as normal. These on-campus programs include Agri-business, Agronomy Technology, Ag Power and Equipment Technician, Dairy Management, Farm Operations and Management, GPS/GIS Information Systems Technology, and Poultry Management.
