Warrior Clay Target

Willmar and Hutchinson Campuses

About the Team

The sport of clay target shooting is growing in popularity at college and high school levels. It's exciting and not uncommon for high school teams to draw interest from 40-60 students.

In Ridgewater's third season, 30 students participated in the Willmar and Hutchinson leagues. Together, for year-end competitions, they made up the Ridgewater Warrior team.

The collegiate clay target season runs from early September through late October. Once participants indicate interest in the fall, coaches and players determine practice times. Campus leagues meet on Wednesday late afternoons.

Each campus has its own community practice location to minimize drive time and maximize practice time. Willmar campus students practice at the Willmar Trap Range. Hutchinson campus students head to the Cedar Mills Gun Club. Participants provide their own guns and must possess a firearm safety certificate. Ridgewater provides ear and eye protection. Teams do not travel for weekly competitions, but rather compete virtually by shooting at home ranges and submitting scores virtually against their weekly opponent.
