Blended Online and Off Campus

About the Program

Meat cutters are critical team members in the process that moves agricultural animal assets to satisfied consumers' tables. Who's hungry?

As a leader in agricultural education, Ridgewater now offers Meat Cutting.

For the convenience of working students, Ridgewater offers maximum flexibility with online courses and in-person labs. Courses will run in four-week sections, and include in-person labs at a certified partner facility near you. Meat Cutting labs will include 16 hours of hands-on practice each week. In just one, full-time semester, you will gain confidence in:

- Meat cutting equipment use and procedures
- Food safety
- Direct farm marketing
- Livestock and poultry slaughtering and processing
- Advanced meat processing fundamentals

Students will also choose one of two electives: wild game animal processing or introductory animal science.

You must be at least 18 years old to enroll. Lifting is required.

Program Distinctions

- Flexible, blended delivery with asynchronous online courses and in-person labs
- Hands-on education and preparation for in-demand careers
- Real-world experiences through certified industry partners near you
- Ability to take a full semester load or individual courses
- Fall and spring starts, with additional flexibility available by arrangement

Career Info

Retirements of small-town butchers and growing shortages of meat processing workers due to the pandemic have elevated the need for training more meat cutters.

Meat cutters can earn between $16.00-$27.75 per hour. The demand is expected to grow at a rate of 2.4% for the next 10 years.
